At The Ursuline School, our students are actively engaged in the pursuit of knowledge while remaining faithful to our tradition of Serviam. In my role as president, providing accomplished presenters capable of speaking to the needs of our community helps to take our mission beyond the classroom and show students how they can apply it to real-life scenarios. Caroline Adams Miller, with her engaging and informative presentation, "When Women Win," was the perfect way to kick off Women's History Month. Her no-nonsense, evidence-based approach to helping women and girls flourish and succeed hits the mark! If you're looking for inspiration on how women and girls can change the world, look no further than Caroline Adams Miller.

Caroline Adams Miller spoke for our audience of 450 credit union board members and knocked it out of the park.

Her message that we can "do hard things," but we need people to help us succeed was exactly what our audience needed to hear. She presented in an entertaining way but always from a base of sound research and without the fluff that so often accompanies messages of encouragement/motivation from the keynote stage. After her session, she had people lined up to talk with her. That's always a good sign that a presentation was a great success!

- Christopher Stevenson, CUES

Caroline, you delivered what we asked for and more! We've had terrific feedback that you were easy to relate to, your stories were relevant, and the research gave your talk credibility for a high-powered audience. Everyone agreed they got rejuvenated, reignited, and recommitted to setting and accomplishing meaningful goals.

There are only two speakers I've ever heard who are worth the time, money, and effort it takes to get there. One was the first blind person to achieve the summit of Mt. Everest. The other is Caroline. She is mesmerizing, authoritative, and exceptionally skillful at communicating her passion for goal accomplishment and Positive Psychology.

Caroline not only customized her presentation to meet the needs of our audience, she also went above and beyond helping us get the message out prior to our conference. You painted a visual picture of why Grit has become something we don't see because of society. The delivery was intentional and relatable. As a teacher, it is easy to feel lost during a presentation at conferences like that because the information is over my head. You balanced that well and we literally still talk about your presentation. It was one of the best presentations on GRIT I've seen.

- Erica Lohn, Citizens Academy East

Caroline has inspired us and brought in a powerful conversation about the way and the type of goals we set within the organization. Furthermore, the open reflection of our strengths and the practices to cultivate GRIT have sparked a new way of approaching the way we can lead our teams, have a real impact in every person through connecting with their purpose, and develop a mindset to have bigger and bolder goals for our organization.
