

Scott Shellstrom Speaker Bio

What if you could hire Leonardo da Vinci as your next keynote speaker?

Scott Shellstrom is the modern day da Vinci, and inspires teams everywhere to rediscover their own ability for creativity and innovation.

As a former advertising executive, Scott knows that creativity is more than an art, it's a skill. His skills have placed him on some of New York City's most prominent improv comedy stages, and his paintings on some of the most prestigious gallery walls. He knows how to perform, both as a television host on the Travel Channel, as well as the first white guy on Soul Train.

Scott's presentations will unite and excite your team as they collaborate and support one another using proven techniques of improvisational theater. He ignites productivity and inspires unique solutions to everyday challenges. He teaches how to prosper from perspective and see more than what the picture first portrays.

(And if that wasn't enough, just wait for his masterpiece painting...done in four minutes...upside down.)
